DEDICATION

- To my parents who inculcated in me the essence of life: research, albeit they did not receive regular schooling.
- To my wife Niemat Abdul Wahhab who tolerated my isolation for months in my room with my books and papers, leaving her manage the house and cater for the kids all alone, yet providing a comfortable environment for me to study.
- To my offspring hoping for this effort to inspire them pursue their studies.

Acknowledgement

Praise (be) to Allah the Almighty. . . Who bestowed Grace and wisdom, without which I could never even think of pursuing this endeavor, especially in this age of mine.

I am deeply grateful to my supervisor Dr. Diaudeen Mohammad El-Hasan who persistently encouraged me to carry on my studies and not to yield before disappointments. This is in addition to his patience with me, when I visit him at his office or through phone calls wherever and whenever he was, paving the way for me to conduct this research. I am thankful for his sincere follow up... May Allah bless him.

I am also thankful for professors and students at Sudan University of Sciences and Technology and University of Bakht er-Ruda, for their cooperation with references, the literature provided, and for conducting the test.

My brother Kamal AbdulMajeed deserves more than bidding him thanks. Being a computer sciences specialist, his assistance was a real leverage for my work.

I am indebted to a number of professors and colleagues, who assisted me greatly as specialized linguists and Language teachers, especially: Dr. Garieb Allah Hamdoun, assistant professor at King Saud University, Riyadh.

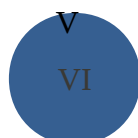

Mr. Khalid Othman, lecturer at University of Bakht er-Ruda, deserves my thanks for his remarks on the test; and my colleague Dr. Mutasem Musa'ad of the Malaysian embassy, Riyadh.

Also, from Arab Urban Development Institute, Riyadh: Prof. Osman Alhasan and Dr. Yasser Awad Al-Kareem.

And not to forget the staff at the library of King Saud University and King Abdul Aziz General Library, both in Riyadh, S.A., who allowed me to spend extended hours at their premises writing my thesis and reviewing references.
